Independence
Internal and external causes

External causes

Independence of USA

In 1776 american people were tired about the british crown so they started creating meetings to be free of them and that they can organize a government by their own.

French Revolution

In 1789 french people were mad at the King because there was no equality between French people and the King, because the King was way more powerful than the citizens so they started fighting against the King.

King Fernando is captured

In 1808 Napoléon arrived to Spain and forced the King to give him his kingdom, and send the King to prison. Napoléon gave Spain to his brother to be in charge of the whole country.

Internal causes

Creoles displeasure

In 18th century the creoles were tired and angry because it doesn't matter if you had Spanish blood if you were born in America, you don't have the same importance or either respect.

Jesuits expulsion

In 1767 Jesuits were in charge of the education so as the creoles were tired and angry they were going to change the rules but if they were intelligent they were going to be able to do it what Spaniards didn't want to, so they decided to send back the Jesuits to Europe.

Economical situation

In 1778 Spaniards realized that creoles were against them, they raise up the taxes and made lots of reforms, this was called bourbon reforms.

Reflection questions: Economical Situation.

Why did it happen?
This happened because as creoles were against Spaniards, they got mad so as a revenge or to stop them they raise up taxes.

Why was it important?
This was important because this way Spaniards punished creoles for thinking in their independence and create their own government.

What were the consequences?
The consequences were that creoles had serious problems related with their economy when paying taxes.
